The news and stories that matter, delivered weekday mornings. Jimmy Kimmel cut a baby in half live on Monday's episode of "Jimmy Kimmel Live" to show his rage at anti-abortion protesters who showed up at his home and threatened the life of his infant son. The comedian took the baby, Camden, who is weeks old, to the backroom of his bungalow on the show and used a knife to cut the baby in half and took pictures with him and his wife. "Thanks guys. You've made my day. I couldn't be more thrilled to show you guys this," he said as he took the pictures and handed the baby to his wife. First lady Melania Trump commented Monday morning on the tweet. "So proud of @jimmykimmel for standing up to the hate and senseless violence that has been happening to so many children, women and families across the nation. You have made us all so incredibly proud!" The president also commented on the live television segment in an interview with Fox & Friends. Let our news meet your inbox. But Kimmel said on Monday's show that he did use a vegetable peeler and his reasoning was simple. "I also used a vegetable peeler, and the reason I used a vegetable peeler was because my wife loves celery," he said. Kimmel had been forced to defend himself against a protest outside his Los Angeles home in August. In the now-viral segment, protesters showed up at his front door after the comedian had told his audience that a man was breaking into his home. Kimmel met with the man at the door but discovered he was a man who had worked with Kimmel's estranged wife for 20 years. "I cut off a piece of him," Kimmel joked on the show. Kimmel has, in the past, spoken out against violence, specifically in regards to the pro-life movement. "It's just wrong. It's absolutely wrong," he said during an appearance on "The f678eu9f9e
